POLICY TITLE: Academic Dismissal from a Graduate Program

OVERVIEW: An explanation of the dismissal process for graduate students

OFFICE/DEPARTMENT RESPONSIBLE: Graduate Studies

DATE UPDATED: June 2009

Academic Dismissal from a Graduate Program

Students may be academically dismissed from a graduate program for reasons that include:

1. Failure to meet the conditions of a Conditional Admission, following recommendation of the academic department.
2. Failure to maintain a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or above (see academic probation policy).
3. Failure to meet individual program requirements. Such requirements may be in addition to and more restrictive than those delineated in the preceding two items.

A student who has been academically dismissed from any graduate degree program at The College at Brockport must wait at least one calendar year before enrolling in any graduate course at The College at Brockport. Students may explore options for appeal of an academic dismissal from a graduate program with the School Dean that is affiliated with their graduate program.
