Packaging is the term used to describe the method of awarding different types of financial assistance. It is also the process of finding the best combination of aid to meet a student's financial need, given limited resources and institutional constraints that vary from school to school. The College at Brockport's packaging formula is available at www.brockport.edu/finaid/applications_forms.htm.

The following is a checklist of what needs to be completed before we can process and disburse financial aid:
