Did you know?

- Brockport has been named one of Kiplinger’s Personal Finance 100 Best Values in Public Colleges.
- Brockport was selected to receive a “Best in the Northeast” designation from The Princeton Review and is designated an “American Best Value College” in the US News and World Report “Guide to America’s Best Colleges.”
- Physical Education is one of The College at Brockport’s signature programs. It has a rich history as one of the best and largest programs in the country.
- The Department of Kinesiology, Sports Studies and Physical Education was home to more Extraordinary Scholars in 2008-2009 than any other department on campus.
- Department faculty include two Distinguished Professors; four Chancellor’s Award recipients for Excellence in Teaching; two Chancellor’s Award honorees for Excellence in Scholarship and Creative Activity; and two Chancellor’s Award recipients for Excellence in Faculty Service.
- The Department implemented five new stand-alone majors in fall 2009. The new majors are: Athletic Training, Exercise Physiology, Kinesiology, Physical Education Teacher Education, and Sport Management.
- The Physical Education Teacher Education program is accredited by NCATE, the “gold standard” in accreditation of teacher education programs.
- A Brockport physical education major has won the JB Nash Award for the Best Physical Education Major in the state from New York State Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance (NYS AHPERD) in eight of the past 11 years.
- Four of the last nine presidents of NYS AHPERD have a degree from The College at Brockport; so does the Executive Director of NYS AHPERD.
- The 2007-2008 National AAHPERD Alliance Scholar, Dr. Jane Clark, was a Brockport graduate. Dr. Clark recently received the Brockport Alumni Hall of Heritage Award, the most prestigious honor the College bestows upon an alumnus. Dr. Clark is currently the chair of the Department of Kinesiology at the University of Maryland.
• Thirteen faculty members have received an “Amazing Person Award” from NYS AHPERD in the past nine years.

• The Physical Education Majors Club routinely has more than 100 members at a meeting! It was the Brockport Student Government’s Outstanding Club of the Year in 2007-2008.

• The Athletic Training major is accredited by CAATE, the “gold standard” in the field.

• Exercise Physiology graduates are highly sought after in the corporate world; almost all fitness-based employees at Johnson & Johnson and Xerox are Brockport graduates.

• Exercise Physiology is one of the most popular concentrations for students in the 3+3 Doctor of Physical Therapy program.

• Students in the Athletic Training and Exercise Physiology programs have outstanding records of acceptance to graduate programs and receive graduate assistantships to some of the most competitive graduate schools in the country.

• The Sport Management program at Brockport is the second oldest sport management program in the country. Two of the most prominent leaders in the field of sport management teach full time in the program.

• Sport Management graduates are employed as leaders in a variety of agencies from the National YMCA to the Buffalo Bills football organization.

• Brockport’s graduate program in Adapted Physical Education (APE) is the longest standing in the country. Again, some of the world leaders in APE are faculty members in this program.

• All programs in the department emphasize quality, high standards and professionalism. This department is one of the largest departments on campus, yet our faculty and staff know our students well. Students have numerous opportunities to work with faculty on research projects, conference presentations, etc.—while they are students and after they graduate from Brockport.

• The prestigious International Association for the Philosophy of Sport (IAPS) had its roots in Brockport with the first meeting held on campus in 1973. One of the original Presidents of that association was a Brockport faculty member, Professor Emeritus Warren P. Fraleigh. Several other former Brockport faculty members have also led the association. Today, KSSPE faculty member Dr. Cesar Torres, continues the tradition of excellence as the current President of IAPS.
