ARTS MANAGEMENT: AN INTERDISCIPLINARY MINOR

BACKGROUND

Because of the increase in the government subsidy and corporate funding to arts organizations in 1960, "not-for-profit theatre companies have come into being and have spread from New York City across the country... The United States has experienced a major shift in the organizational structure" of arts organizations (Stewart 31). According to Barlow, this has necessitated the concomitant establishment of legal and administrative structures, boards of directors, doctrines of accountability and procedures, and sophisticated fiscal management. We now have a large body of individuals who make their living not creating theatrical art, but facilitating the creation of that art through the management of theatres (Barlow 13).

Stephen Langley, a prominent arts management educator, also drew attention to "a growing need for knowledgeable arts managers and administrators" (Langley XIII). The fact that the effective management of arts organizations is essential to use the resources economically, and to facilitate the creation and appreciation of art works, has been emphasized by the Rockefeller Report:

Too many people believe that a simple infusion of more money will solve all the problems of the performing arts in this country... We will not realize our objective--flourishing world of the performing Arts in America--unless those who guide our performing arts organizations demonstrate a capacity to see beyond present crises and plan for the expanding future. As talent is needed to create and perform a work of art, so equal talent--though of different sort--is needed to create and govern the institutions that provide the settings for these arts. It is for this reason the panel believes it essential for an arts organization to have an effective board of trustees and competent management in addition to talented artistic direction (The Performing Arts Problem and Prospects 149-150).

The functions and responsibilities of arts management are ever expanding, and they include: regular business routines, accounting, records and reports, audience development, public relations, publicity, labor negotiations and contracts, backstage and front of house operations, box office, as well as computers and information services.

Because of the complex needs of the arts management, proper training of the administrators is imperative. "The steps that have been taken to train a new generation of art administrators "are welcome, but more effort, on a more formal basis, needs to be made—perhaps within the universities" (The Performing Arts Problems and Prospects 166). A liberal arts institutions, like ours, is an ideal place to begin such training. Because, in addition to teaching the essentials of arts management, the students are also exposed to a breadth of various arts and disciplines. Therefore, we are proposing a Minor in Arts Management at Brockport.

Goals

The Minor in Arts Management is designed to provide an overview of technical, human, and conceptual skills necessary for successful administration of arts organizations. Specific goals of the program are:

1. To provide theory and techniques of managing arts organizations.
2. To provide skills in marketing, public relations, and audience development.
3. To provide practical experience in box office, house management, stage management, and gallery management.
4. To facilitate individual artists to manage their own artistic endeavors.

This program will fulfill two major goals of the Mission Statement of the College:

1. The development of interdisciplinary programs.
2. The development of career oriented programs.

The students completing this Minor will be able to obtain entry level jobs in various areas of art management, such as marketing, promotion, sales, company management, tour management, gallery management, house management, box office, etc.

Curriculum Structure

The curriculum structure of the Minor in Arts Management consists of 20 credits:

- FA 210 AT: Arts Organizations & Information Services (3 credits)
- BUS 205 B: Fundamental Accounting I (3 credits)
- BUS 335 A: Principles of Marketing (3 credits)
- ART 470 B: Gallery Management (3 credits)
CMC 332 A: Principles of Public Relations (3 credits)

[Note: Prerequisite and corequisite of this course will be waived for non-Communication majors who are participating in this Minor. However, before taking this course, the students have to complete FA 210: Arts Organizations and Information Management to learn word processing.]

DNS 236 B: Dance Management (1 credit)
THE 108 B: Theatre Production: Management (1 credit)
FA 451 B: Internship in Arts Management (3-6 credits)

As a pre-requisite to the FA 451: Internship in Arts Management, the students are required to take at least one course in the area of their specialization, if they have not taken such a course as a part of their major, general education, or electives. The FA 210: Arts Organizations and Information Services, and FA 252: Managing the Arts will fulfill the computer literacy requirement of General Education core. The students are also strongly urged to take at least one studio course in each of the four arts areas (Art, Dance, Music, and Theatre).

Implementation

1. The program will be managed by the Committee for Minor in Arts Management (CMAN) consisting of faculty from the participating departments: Art, Communication, Dance, and Theatre. One or two student representatives will also be on the Committee.

2. The program will be under the supervision of the Dean of School of Arts and Performance.

3. The program will be administered by the Coordinator who will be elected by the Committee for Minor in Arts Management for a period of two years. The elections will be held every two years, and incumbents are eligible for re-election.

4. The Coordinator will administer the program in consultation with the Committee for Minor in Arts Management, Dean of School of Arts and Performance, and the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

5. No additional faculty and staff, or budget is necessary to initiate and manage this program. Office of the Dean of Arts and Performance will provide the operating expenses which are minimal.

6. The Drake Memorial Library has sufficient number of books and periodicals to help students in their studies.
Arts Management Minor - p. 4)

7. Many organizations in Rochester, Buffalo, Albany, New York, and other parts of the country will be used for internship training.

8. The program will be evaluated periodically, and revisions will be made to the program as deemed necessary.

9. The program is planned for implementation for Fall 1989.
